

flumphbase.com

Flumph Base provides all the tools you need to simplify your next Dungeons and Dragons campaign.

Named after a delightfully whimsical and knowledgeable creature from Dungeons and Dragons, Flumph Base strives to simplify D&D for everyone. While the endless imaginative nature of the game cannot be matched, annoying mechanics and tedious searching for rules can render the most exciting moments a dull affair. Flumph Base provides everything, from simple tools like initiative tracking and dice rolling, to battle simulations powered by the D&D 5e API.

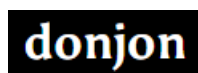

Matthew (17) – A New D&D Player

Matthew is a high school student who just heard about D&D, so he uses his phone while he's out to supplement the sourcebooks. He is content just looking through spells and monsters, but he likes to be able to quickly jump to new pages and content.

Anna (34) – A Veteran D&D Player

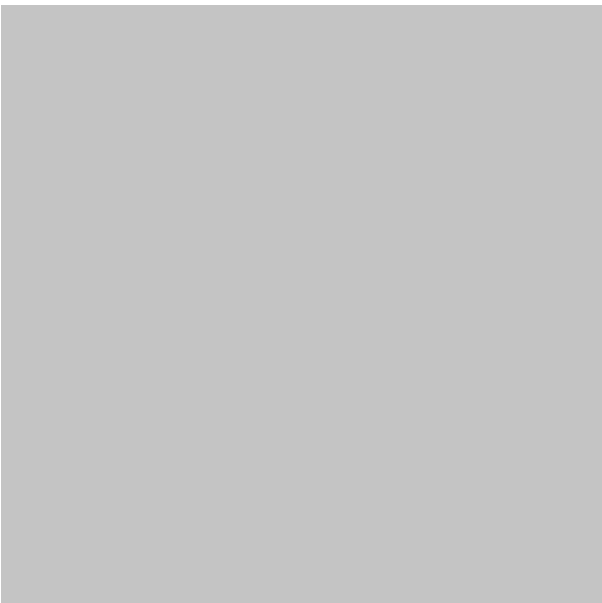

Anna is an author who has been playing D&D since middle school. She knows the rules better than anyone, but finds that battles are usually tedious and force her to focus on mechanics instead of narrative. When she plays, she uses her laptop to reference her notes.

The D&D 5e API is an unofficial open-source API and database, providing creature stat blocks, weapons and items information, and many other fantastic resources. Without the hard work of all of the many contributors to that API, this website could not exist. You can check out the API here, and contribute on Github.

At the end of each of its turns, the target must make a DC 10 Constitution saving throw, taking 2 (1d4) acid damage on a failure or ending the recurring acid damage on a success. A lesser restoration spell cast on the target also ends the recurring acid damage.
